THE WELSH CASE.—The trial of Thos. Welsh, charged with killing Richard Hennegen in June last, was concluded yesterday, and resulted in the acquittal of Welsh. The case was given to the jury about half-past five colock in the evening, and after an absence of only fifteen minutes they returned a verdict of not guilty. Welsh and Hennegen were brothers-in-law, Hennegen being the huband of Welsh's sister, and hall not been on good terms for some time previous being the previous the previous the state of the stat on good terms for some time previous to Henngen's death. The evidence is the case shows that Hennegen had frequently threatened to kill Welsh, and that he insulted him and attempted to pick a quarrel with him whenever occasion offered. On the evening of the difficulty the parties nest near the Baltimora's Ohioshors.

Retheratened to kill Welsh, and that he insuled imm and attempted to pick a quare rel with him whenever occasion offered. On the evening of the difficulty the parties met near the Baltimore & Ohio shops, when, Hennegen renewed his insults upon Welsh, and after addressing him in mestimaliting and violent language, dared him to light. As upon former occasions, Welsh evidently desired to avoid a difficulty, and walked down the railroad in company with a young lady. Hennegen followed, continuing his insulting language. Welsh left the young lady, and met Hennegen on the railroad track, when several blows were exchanged, and Hennegen fell—dead. There was some difference of opinion as to the immediate cause [of. Hennegen's death, it being a natter of doubt whether he was killed by a hlow from Welsh's fist, or a fall on the rail. The prisoner was promptly distingted from custody.

ago the man who was hired to run the poetry machine turned it backwards in attempting to manufacture an original hexameter, long metred poem called "Beautiful Snow." Perfectly regardless of expense it was repaired, and yesterday a committee appointed to examine and test it pronounced it perfectly safe. At one time it was run at the incredible speed of 9,000 revolutions a sectiond and without as much as getting a hot box, ground out the following touching poem: "The shales of night were falling fast, As up Market street there passed A lovely maid who often asked, Am I to be Queen of the May?" Last night two little wandering Jews, came into town and told the paws. That at the canada are drawn by Trivotown and told the paws. Am I to be Queen of the May?' Last night two little wandering Jews, came into town and told the news: That at Bridgeport a frozen corpse was found, While pinned to the robes that wrapped it round, Were the words, 'I was Queen of the May.'"

TEMPERANCE.—Although the temperance excitement that prevailed in the city a few weeks since has entirely disappeared, meetings are still held at irregular intervals by the friends of the cause. A meeting was held in the Weeley M. E. Church, South Wheeling, last night, which was quite well attended, considering the inclemency of the weather. Addresses were made by Bev.
